- 4- Use the appropriate absorbent material for liquid spills
- 5- Slowly add absorbent material on and around the spill and allow the chemical to absorb. Apply enough absorbent to completely cover the spilled liquid.
- 6- Sweep up the absorbed spill from the outside towards the middle.
- 7- Scoop up and deposit in a leak-proof container.

Grievance policy and process

Purpose of the policy

The Grievance Policy enables employees to raise issues that they are unhappy about at work and to ensure they are quickly resolved.

Employee's responsibilities

- To raise the grievance informally as soon as possible with their immediate line manager or their manager's manager.
- To provide evidence for their case, for example, by keeping a log of the incidents that are causing the grievance.

Manager's responsibilities

- To listen objectively to the grievance from the employee's perspective and recognize that no grievance is trivial to the employee raising it.
- To seek to resolve the issue as soon as possible.
- The manager is responsible for the application of this policy in their work area.

Process

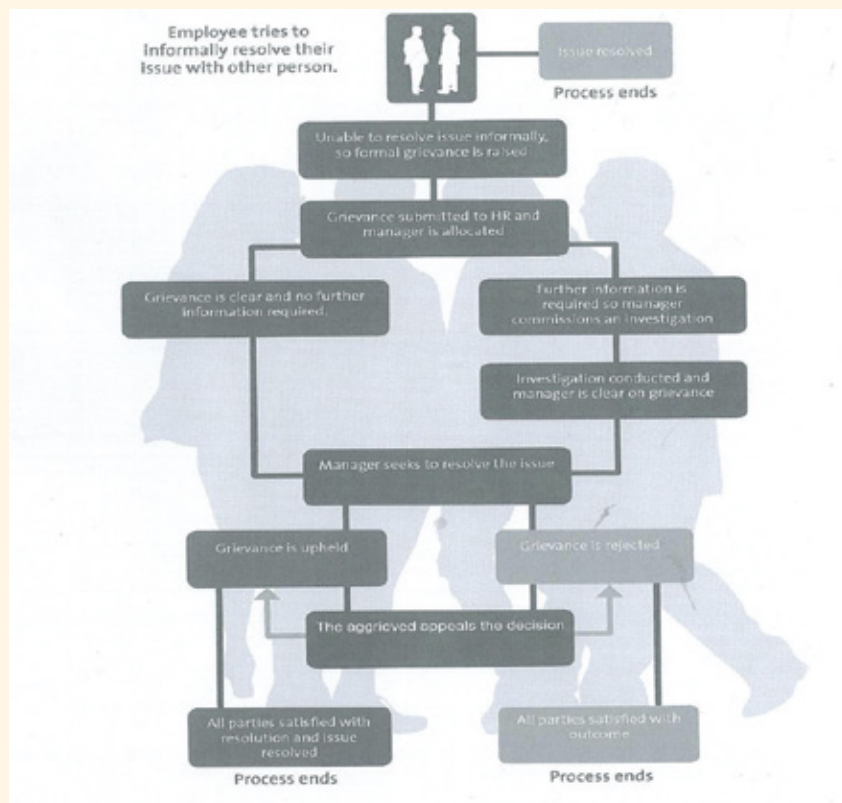

First steps/informal process

- If an employee wishes to raise a grievance, they should first try to resolve the issue informally. It is recommended that they try talking to the person whom the grievance is against as a first step. If that is not possible or too uncomfortable, they should talk to their line manager, another colleague or manager.
- The representative will be able to help the employee with trying to resolve the issue quickly and informally. They may also help by organizing a meeting with the person who has aggrieved them, along with another objective person, and by helping to find ways to remedy the situation.
- If the aggrieved employee is not comfortable approaching the person directly the manager may need to act as a mediator between both parties to try to resolve the issue

Grievance policy and process

Formal grievances

- The employee will need to provide evidence to support their case. In most cases it is helpful to keep a log of incidents if the grievance relates to behavior that has been on-going.
- The HR department will check that all possibilities for resolving the grievance informally have been exhausted, and may speak to the line manager (or their line manager if the grievance is against the employee's line manager) as part of that process.
- HR will also check whether raising a grievance is the appropriate process to resolve the issues (for example, if someone is not happy with a recent disciplinary sanction, they must use the appeal process within the appeal policy), and they will check that the suggested remedy is feasible. If not, they will let the employee know that the grievance is not accepted, and will advise on what to do instead.
- If a grievance is accepted a formal investigation with whom the grievance is against. If the outcome of the investigation into the grievance involves taking disciplinary action against the alleged perpetrator, then must follow the Disciplinary Policy. They can tell the person who raised the grievance that they will be taking formal action under the disciplinary policy, but they cannot give any further detail (e.g. the level of sanction), which is confidential.
